APPLICATION FORM
Master of Arts Program
Child, Youth, Family and Community Studies

Please tell us how your background and social location shape your interest in this program:

Provide a summary of your relevant paid and/or volunteer work experience:

How has your experience with children, youth, families and/or communities prepared you for this program?

This MA program requires research methods courses and the completion of a research project of thesis. It is, therefore, important that you provide a description of:

- a) your involvement in research projects, including undergraduate theses, research internships, or research assistantships. Highlight any practical experience and skills gained through participation in research projects.
- b) research courses you have taken, including research knowledge and skills you have acquired.

This program requires you to have a selected text-based research topic and question(s) that does not involve human participants for the start of the program in September. Please provide your specific research question(s) that you plan to explore:

Identify one or two specific topics of interest for your Master's research, including a brief rationale.

Please refer to the list of research faculty on our webpage and identify one or two potential academic supervisors based on your research question(s).

Please describe your key academic and/or professional strengths as related to Child, Youth, Family and Community Studies.

Please identify key challenges you anticipate facing in a graduate program and the tools and resources you would engage to meet these challenges.

What are your career goals on completion of this program?

Do you have any learning accessibility requirements that you would like to share?

We invite Indigenous applicants to share a personal statement, outlining your connection with one or more Indigenous communities and how your Indigenous identity informs your interest in our program.

I understand that this MA program includes a mandatory three-week summer institute held on the University of Victoria campus during the summer term.

I understand that this MA program is offered primarily online, aside from the mandatory three-week summer institute, and that course sessions may be both synchronous (live weekly sessions) and asynchronous. I also understand that, to participate in online courses, I am required to have a stable internet connection, a private space for joining videoconference sessions and videoconferencing equipment (camera, microphone, etc.).

I confirm that I have completed my application without any professional assistance or the use of generative AI.
