Description

Intensive written and oral French. This course is meant to bring the student to level A1 of the Common European Framework for languages. It focuses on the 4 aspects of language learning: oral comprehension, oral expression, written comprehension, and written expression.

Prerequisites

FRAN100 is intended for beginners and near beginners. The course is normally not open to students who have taken French 11 or the equivalent in the last 3 years. For any questions or exemption requests, please contact the Department of French and Francophone Studies.

Instructional Methods

Various types of documents, exercises and evaluations will focus on the following: communicative language activities and strategies: oral production (speaking), written production (writing), oral reception (listening), visual reception (reading), audio-visual reception (understanding and listening), oral and written interactions.

In this class, you will learn

We will focus on the communicative aspect of French in order to make you a language user. You will learn how to:

- talk about your interests and your activities
- express your likes and dislikes
- Introduce your family
- Describe your environment
- talk about routine practices
- share your hobbies, describe your friends and ask friends out.
- talk about travels and shopping
- and of course, talk about food
