

University
of Victoria

University
of Victoria

Graduate Student
Law & Society
Research Group

Grad meetings

Research ethics: why it matters

Kenna Miskelly, BSc, MA
Human Research Ethics Facilitator
University of Victoria - HREB

Thursday Dec 17, 2020 09:30 am PST (Vancouver)

Did you know that all researchers at the University of Victoria, including students, faculty, and staff, need an ethics approval or exemption to conduct research involving human participants, personal information, and biological materials? The purpose of UVic's research ethics review process is to guarantee that research conducted by our institution and specialists follows the ethical standards established by Canadian universities, funding agencies, and regulatory bodies. In this talk organized by the UVic Graduate Student Law & Society Research Group with support from the Human Research Ethics Board (HREB), Kenna Miskelly not only explained why research ethics is important, but also explored UVic's research ethics review process and shared some tips on how to prepare a successful research ethics application.

<https://uvic.zoom.us/j/87479545384?pwd=Y2hGcTNhU3hrcG92RmtUeG1aemR3UT09>

Meeting ID: 874 7954 5384

Password: 226484

Visit our website to learn more

Contact: estebanvallejotoledo@uvic.ca & evalinde@uvic.ca