Topics: The CFGS promotes critical citizenship in a complex and rapidly changing global environment including the advancement and understanding of major global issues by civil society, the private sector, governments, and international institutions. Researchers are invited to apply who are engaged in similar topics of a global dimension. These topics may include, but are not limited to: global governance, international environmental challenges, social and ecological justice issues, and culture and identity. Applications from all disciplinary backgrounds are welcome.

Type: These fellowships would cover the costs of one course, and would exempt successful applicants from (most) administrative duties in their home department/program. Fellows would take up residency at the CFGS offices for a six-month period.

1. Research Completion Faculty Fellowships: These fellowships are aimed at UVic faculty members involved in well-advanced research projects who are seeking an unstained period of time to bring their projects to fruition.

2. Research Development Faculty Fellowships: These fellowships are aimed at UVic faculty members who are committed to launching a major collaborative research project involving national or international partners (in the academic, political or NGO spheres) and addressing one of the four CFGS themes. These fellowships would allow UVic faculty to craft major grant applications and create international research teams.

Value: Teaching-release time equal to the value of one 1.5 credit course; office space (including wireless Internet, fax and copy services) in the Centre's Sedgewick premises.

Eligibility: The fellowships are open to faculty members with regular tenured or tenure-track appointments at the University of Victoria.
