

What is Global Health Research? & What is Canada's contribution to this field?

When: Sept. 26, 2013 | 10:30-Noon

What: FREE Public Seminar

Where: Sedgewick C168

Please RSVP jodie@uvic.ca

Details:

This informal seminar will include a brief introduction to the emerging field of global health research, and Canada's involvement in this evolving story.

This will include the work of the Canadian Coalition for Global Health Research, a non-governmental organization that "promotes better and more equitable health worldwide, through the production and use of knowledge" (see: www.ccghr.ca).

The University of Victoria is one of 20 Canadian universities that are institutional members of the Coalition. Following the introductory presentation, there will be an open discussion about the work and interests in this field by members of the UVic community, and an exploration of how these activities can be more effectively harmonized.

Vic Neufeld is Professor Emeritus, Health Sciences at McMaster University, and National Coordinator, Canadian Coalition for Global Health Research. He has recently been appointed as an Adjunct Professor in UVic's Faculty of Human and Social Development.

University of Victoria
Public Health
& Social Policy

This event is Co-Sponsored by the Centre for Global Studies and The School of Public Health & Social Policy
www.globalcentres.org | for information and to RSVP contact jodie@uvic.ca | 250.721.8800

