Emily Carr was born and lived most of her life in the James Bay neighbourhood, BC's oldest residential area. Though she is best known as an artist for her colourful renditions of totem poles and swirling forests, she was also an award-winning author. Her childhood memories of James Bay are as idiosyncratic as her paintings. Excerpts from The Book of Small and The House of All Sorts provide a delightful backdrop to a walk along streets of heritage houses that Emily knew well. Join historian John Adams on this leisurely walk through the neighbourhood where he now lives and hear many of the fascinating historical anecdotes he has discovered that bring life to the past. The tour will start at the "Emily Carr Statue" at the corner of Belleville and Government Streets, on the grounds of the Empress Hotel and will end at Emily Carr House, 207 Government Street.
