

Geography and the working world: How co-op experiences bring Geography to life

Geography Co-op Students
Faculty of Social Sciences, UVic

Co-op students who completed a range of placements such as wildlife conservation, climate data analysis, resource management research, and policy implementation with organizations such as Environment Canada, Parks Canada, Project Watershed, and BC Ministry of Agriculture will share their insights about what their work was like, what they learned, and how UVic Geography prepared them for it. This will be a dynamic session with five presenters that could inspire your research, your academic pursuits, and your careers!
