

Breanna Lawrence is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Education. Focused on child and youth mental health, her teaching and research draws on social ecological resilience frameworks. Breanna's professional training as a counsellor and psychologist inform her teaching and research interests. She has been teaching inclusive education and counselling courses to both undergraduate and graduate students at the post-secondary level for the past 13 years. Breanna also holds SSHRC-grant funding and a strong record of interdisciplinary and community-based research initiatives. With experience on various university-wide committees from her previous institution, including Senate and Human Research Ethics, Breanna demonstrates commitment and interest in shared governance and university service.